

Mrs. Hall Cheers Brother in Jail

room, the flash guns boomed and cameras clicked.

Mrs. Hall made no effort to hide her face. Once more she smiled and commented in an amused voice on the activity of photographers.

Afternoon of Bridge

After lunch the party returned to the jail, presumably for an afternoon of bridge with Henry Carpenter or eccentric Willie—if Willie plays bridge.

Following close on the heels of the defense contention that Mrs. Gibson, the "Pig Woman," had lied in her initial statement that she had witnessed the murder in order to claim large rewards offered by newspapers for a solution of the crime, Inspector Underwood, in charge of the state's investigators, declared today that Lieut. Cieciuch in New York, aided by "witness number 2," was hot on the trail of "witness number 3," who is alleged to have seen the murder committed.

Underwood said that "number 2" was a private detective, and that "number 3" was also an operative for a New York city detective agency.

Hired to Guard Hall

In this connection, it will be recalled that Walter R. Burnsley, head of a detective agency at 261 West 125th St., New York, is alleged to have revealed to the state that his firm was hired by Dr. Hall to guard him against bodily harm some weeks before the tragedy.

Sergeant Harry Dickman, one-time trooper in the New Jersey state police, who disappeared more than a year ago leaving a month's pay behind, and who was afterwards located in an army disciplinary barracks in California serving a term for desertion, arrived in New York today aboard the army transport St. Mihiel, and will be held on Governors Island to await the call of New Jersey authorities.

Inspector Underwood, asked when Dickman would be examined, replied he could not say.

The former trooper is alleged to have signed a statement in California in which he admitted being "bought off" by the Hall forces after he had secured information from Louise Geist, once a servant in the Hall home, implicating Mrs. Hall in the murders.

Brother Scouts Report Ward Is Found on Coast

Ralph Ward, brother of Walter S. Ward, son of the wealthy Ward Baking Company family, who disappeared mysteriously five months ago, today said he still believed his brother dead.

He made the comment in connection with reports published here that Ward had been found on the Pacific Coast. He said he did not credit the reports.

Cuban Politicians Shoot Down Rivals

HAVANA, Sept. 28 (By U. P.).—The town of Santo Domingo, Santa Clara province, was under military guard today, local Liberal newspapers reported, after a political gun fight in which several persons were seriously wounded. It was estimated that 400 shots were fired.

Dispatches to the Liberal newspapers said that a group of Conservatives concealed themselves in their clubhouse Sunday night and opened fire on a group of Liberals, alleged to have been unarmed. Rural guards were summoned to stop the shooting.

GREEK CABINET QUILTS

ATHENS, Sept. 28 (By U. P.).—The Cabinet formed by Gen. Condylis after his recent overthrow of former Premier Pangalos resigned today.
